

Web Editor’s AGM Report 2025 – 2026

In the past year, the website has continued to be managed by the one-stop webpage managing company Wix, who provide a web-management and page-building service for which the three-year deal was considered as a good package discount saving, along with other discount vouchers, thanks to a regular service with another organisation’s website which I also manage.

The three-year subscription for web management was renewed, from Sep 29, 2025 to Sep 29, 2028 with Wix. This three-year cost was £518.40, was a significant increase compared to the last three years; however, this was in light of the loss of the previous £270 discount coupon, and in respect of a general increase in premiums. We will consider a review of provider in 2028.

Website usage has been up by roughly 8% on last year (fig 1.) from a wide range of sources (fig. 2). There are a range of statistic over the page (or below if on e-report). The option for a ‘members only’ section remains open. It can help with GRDP issues, however, does involve passwords and consent forms. The Facebook group continues to grow, with 410 members (up 86 on last year), which has been useful to many but obviously not ideal for non-Facebook users. A website forum can be set up, however, from experience, I find they are rarely used. Non-Facebook users may wish to consider a WhatsApp or Google Chat groups. Remember, you can visit Facebook groups, even if you don’t have a Facebook account, just as read only function. I would encourage the group members to use the group as good forum for questions and answers. Its URL address is as follows: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/202193698157107>.

As always, if any member has any requests for specific website items, new features or just spots an error, I’m always open to development and suggestions. Of course, I don’t accept that I’m necessarily the best web editor amongst our membership and as such I am always open to relinquishing to role to anyone who wants the job.

Web Editor, Andy Brown
